Coldwater United Methodist Church

Pastor's Ponderings Pastor Scott Marsh

In 2006 Charles Robert IV broke into an Amish school in Lancaster, PN and killed 5 children, he then turned the gun on himself and ended his own life. Perhaps you remember this, or maybe its all awash in the numerous other school shootings since then (there has been 332 since this 2006 incident by the way). As someone who grew up with bomb threats and school shootings, including a shooter in my home school system where a young man ended his own life in my middle school hallway in 1998 with a rifle, I think its important to continue to seek a way to better care for our children/young people in the midst of this chronic crisis.

I know very well that addressing gun violence is complicated. I know that many members of our congregation likely own guns or have some sort of connection to them. I know we all have different solutions to how we think it should be addressed. I know it's sad and depressing and hard to talk about this stuff because as gun violence continues to happen we are continually faced with the what ifs. What if this would happen here, in our schools, to our kids? What if someone would come into my church, my work, my theater? The "what ifs" can be demoralizing, they can keep us from living due to fear... But I also know that this will continue to happen unless we collectively focus on ways to stop it. For me, and the prophets, this work is done partly through judgement, lament, and restoration.

The Bible is no stranger to pain, anger, grief, or any emotion for that matter. Our scripture carries with it the fullness of humanity and taken with a grain or two of context can still guide us through the darkest valley. Don't believe me? Check out the Psalms, these alone express a variety of emotions and situations that we are still experiencing thousands of years after being written. Betrayal, loss, trust, assurance; you name it the Psalms likely have it. But is goes further, read the prophets, there you can find figures who are sick and tired of being sick and tired, folks with a sharp tongue and a calling from God to use it. They speak of society ills, ways in which we have fallen off the beaten path and ceased construction of God's Kingdom for man's pride, jealousy and greed.

One of these prophet is Micah. You may know Micah for the famous verses 4:3 "...they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks" or maybe 6:8 "... what does the Lord require of you but to do justice and to love kindness and to walk humbly with your God?". Both of these are great verses, but Micah has so much more to offer us. This is why I'm going to be leading a Bible study on the book of Micah through the month of August with a focus on gun violence.

We will use the book of Micah to guide folks through a five week study on gun violence and lament. This will be a study that that doesn't seek conformity of feelings or opinions about what actions we need to take to end gun violence but one where the skills are given to express these feelings and opinions through a prophetic lens. Over the course of five weeks we will learn the context of Micah, learn the structuring of Biblical lament, hear Micah's judgement and call to justice, and end the study by beating guns into garden tools. That's right, you read that right, beating or modern swords into modern plowshares.

I hope you can join me for this study and I hope that we can all agree that ending this needless violence is needed for the kingdom Christ calls us to build. A sign up sheet for this study will be in the Narthex on the "sign up board". There will be three study times available (Sun noon, Tues 6 pm, Wed 1 pm) and multiply sessions can be offered if interest is shown. A light meal will be provide at each.

May these prophetic words guide our feet,

Pastor Scott Marsh

Nurse's Notes

Being a pollen allergy sufferer, I have been wondering why I felt so lousy this summer. Then I wondered if it was because of the weather that we have been experiencing. I found out that's exactly why my allergies are so bad this year. Climate change is probably the culprit!

The warming temperatures are allowing the plants and trees to pollinate earlier and continue for longer periods. Experts say to blame this on climate change. The elevated temperatures produce more pollen and the sticky particles that cause our eyes to itch and our noses to run has started sooner and last longer.

According to Kathleen Slonager, the executive director of the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America's Michigan chapter, states that more folks are complaining about allergies this and last year than ever before.

Almost 60 million Americans suffer from allergies. This is when the allergen (pollen) triggers an immune response. Unfortunately, there's no cure. For relief most allergy sufferers result to over-counter medicine or immune-boosting shots.

As it gets hotter, and spring comes sooner and pollen-producing plants flower earlier and longer it makes for longer opportunities for pollen to get into the air and into our noses.

Yingxiao Zhang, a University of Michigan graduate student, authored a study that linked a longer allergy season to climate change.

In her study, she found that over the past 30 years, pollination production over North America has increased by 31 percent. Wow! Zhang concluded her study that pollen emissions could begin 40 days earlier by the end of the century. This conclusion was made because there is a correlation between intense pollen production and warming temperatures.

Michigan has three allergy phases. March trees start pollinating. May grass begins its pollination cycle then in July the weeds start their pollination and lasts into November. Soon allergy season will encompass the whole year.

My sympathy goes out to all my fellow allergy sufferers. Unfortunately, there is no end in sight to our suffering.

M&M workers and guests:

I understand there's some confusion.

- Because St Marks has changed their meal and to provide more variety to our dinners we have rearranged some of our meals.
- The TEAMS have not changed even if what we are serving has changed.
- Schedules are in the kitchen and on the tables.

Feel free to call if you have any questions.
Thanks.
